...shoes, paws and wheels. Help control forest diseases

Keep it clean, protect the forests

Our forests are at risk from tree pests and diseases. Tree diseases can travel. That's not new but the increase in global trade and the impacts of climate change mean that foresters are tackling an increasing number of problems at once.

Pests and diseases can hitch a ride in mud and debris on your shoes, dog's paws and bike tyres, ending up in new forests. We're doing everything we can but we need your help too.

Before a forest visit...

Make sure you've cleaned your shoes, your bike, your kit and your dog too.

This helps slow disease spread, preserving our woodlands now and for future generations.

Together we can help control the spread of diseases.
